Chennai

Formerly known as Madras, Chennai is a conglomeration of several fishing villages and therefore has a single centre. It began taking shape as a city under the British, a transformation which began in 1640 with the establishing of the fortified settlement which came to be known as Fort St. George. It is also believed that St. Thomas was martyred here in Madras and his tomb is housed in the impressive Basilica of San Thome in the historic Mylapore area. Chennai today is considered to be the cultural capital of Southern India and is the fourth largest city in India.

Pondicherry

Pondicherry served as the capital for the French territories in India and was established in the 17th century. Pondicherry has three distinct sections: The French quarters, which runs along the Bay of Bengal, has elegant colonial mansions, parks, bars and cafes. The Tamil quarters where the local population lived is demarcated by a now dry canal.

The third section is the Ashram which dominates the town. Founded in 1926 by Sri Aurobindo, who came to Pondicherry to escape being imprisoned by the British, he was drawn by its spiritual atmosphere. He established an Ashram here along with his disciple Mirra Alfassa who was later known as The Mother. Today this international commune encourages and helps local develop and sell handicraft, and the craft from Pondicherry is much sought after throughout India.

Kumbakonam/Thanjavur

You will drive to Thanjavur today.

On the way you will stop to see the bronze workers who use the lost wax method to make representations of the Chola bronzes. This is a small sleepy village, and the workshop is in a small house with the baking and waxing done in the backyard. The methods are simple and basic – an oven dug into the mud ground to bake the clay, hammers, nails and a file and the results are exquisite and intricately carved statues ranging from one foot to three feet.

In the evening you visit the “Great Temple” the Brihadisvara Temple. This monumental granite temple, one of the finest examples of Chola architecture, is a world heritage monument. Completed in AD 1010 the temple is a symbol of Chola power. The main temple stands in the middle of a rectangular courtyard surrounded by subsidiary shrines with superb sculptures and murals.

Thanjavur/Trichy/Cochin

You drive an hour to Trichy Airport and you depart for the harbor town of Cochin.

COCHIN

Kochi, better known as Cochin is Kerala’s most cosmopolitan city. It was the main trading centre for spices and seafood, the town is in fact a collection of narrow islands. Whilst the more modern Ernakulum boasts restaurants, new built modern shopping malls and commercial complexes, the Mattancherri and Fort Cochin area is still traditional and retains much of its original architecture and old world charm. The area is a blend of Dutch, Portuguese and British architecture, narrow streets crowded with spice shops, galleries and cafes’ and the Jewish synagogue, the oldest in India. The architecture and cuisine reflects the influences of the many traders who came and visited and ultimately settled.

15 February, Tuesday

Cochin

Today you will take a tour of Fort Cochin. You stop at the dhobi Ghats (open air laundries), temples, churches, and the beach. You continue past spice warehouses, the air rich with the smell of dried ginger, cardamom and pepper. This area is very diverse, home to a variety of communities. The architectural differences of the houses, dress and language are some of the aspects the guides will talk about and how these communities came to be associated with the area. You can do this either as a biking tour or driving/walking tour

You will visit the area still referred to as Jew Town. The narrow lanes a mass of antique and souvenir shops, leading to the main attraction of the area – the Pardesi Synagogue, amongst the oldest in India, the interiors are decorated with blue tiles imported from China.

You will stop at the Mattancherri Palace which was commissioned by the Portuguese for the Raja of Kochi in exchange for trading rights. The palace is two stories high and is built in the traditional Kerala style known as “nalukattu” (four buildings around a central courtyard). Made of wood and richly carved, the palace exhibits memorabilia from the Raja of Kochi’s collection, but it is best known for its outstanding murals painted on the walls. Fast fading, one can still see some of these excellent 16th century paintings illustrating episodes from the great Indian epic – The Ramayana.

In the afternoon you can explore the heritage zone where your hotel is located. You can stop at art galleries and the walking tour will introduce you to the historical and cultural diversity of the area. You will walk along the sea front where local families gather. The area is lined with vendors selling food, brightly colored drinks, plastic toys and even wigs. It is a great panorama of life in the city.

You end the day meeting with the dancers who perform the classical Kathakali. The essence of the dance is relating stories through the dramatic make up and every emotive hand and eye movements. During this interactive session you have the option of having the makeup applied and learning some of the expressions used to illustrate moods from anger and fear to joy.

Cochin/Kumarakom

A visit to Kerala is incomplete without a tour of the backwaters. A labyrinthine maze of canals which wind their way through the state, they support a unique lifestyle, one which is dictated by the waters. You will depart at 7:30 AM

You will explore the famous Kerala backwaters today traveling the very narrow channels where no tourists visit. You will do this tour in a Shikara, or small boat. This is an interactive tour and you will stop at small villages and where you join fisherman throwing out nets to catch fish; women making thatch roofs and weaving mats; watch a toddy tapper who gathers the sap from the flower of the tree to make a local alcoholic drink, try making coir ropes and all the while interacting with the simple and very friendly who make the lives along these waters

You disembark and you visit Kottayam. It is believed that Christianity came to Kerala when St. Thomas the Apostle arrived in Kerala in AD 52 and began its long tradition. Kottayam is the main Christian centre in Kerala and the Christians of Kerala largely owed their allegiance to the Orthodox Syrian tradition until the arrival of the Portuguese who tried to encourage the conversion of the Syrian Christians to Roman Catholicism. While they established a thriving Catholic Church, the Syrian tradition survived in various forms. You also visit the temple of Shiva at Ettumanur at Kottayam. The temple has beautiful murals similar to those found in Mattancherri palace.
